The sequential number was an integral part of each Cortez serial number. It was increased by a unit, stamped on a tin plate, and affixed to the coach as it was built. Thus it became possible to determine the coaches position in the overall number produced for a specific year. The range assigned to a particular years sequential series can provide an approximate, but not an exact count of the total number of coaches proiduced in any single year as, occasionally, a single or even a block of sequential numbers were skipped or reassigned. In the early years prior to 1968, the coach serial number was made up of a base number (there were approximately 15 different base numbers) followed by the sequential number. In 1968, and thereafter, the serial number of the coach, not only included the model year, but other pertinent information as well.

The following provide an example of typical serial numbers 1963--1979
